On the Other Hand General Wilson Declares That Islanders Are Satisfied and Serene.

A Nashville dispatch says: Colonel Frank M. Gardenshire, a prominent citizen of Chattanooga, well known over the state, has just returned from a trip to Havana. Gardenshire, in an interview, predicts an uprising on the day of the Havana municipal election this month. He says:

"In my opinion there will be serious trouble in Havana on the day of election. I have several personal friends in Havana, and this seems to be the impression among them.

"According to a late regulation, promulgated by General Wood and other authorities, 60 per cent of the voters will be disfrauchised. Under the rewrite and own $250 worth of property. This rule was advocated by the Spaniards and the more intelligent classes in Havana. The regulation almost shuts out the average run of natives, and many of them declare that if they are not permitted to vote in the election there will be some throat cutting on election day.

"The people from the outside country are now moving into Havana, and all want offices. Some of them are fighting for places on the police force, while there are just twelve caudidates in the race for mayor.

"The natives seem to hate our soldiers worse than the Spaniards, but the impression prevails among the selves the minute the troops are withdrawn. In fact, so far as I could see, the gardening and farm work is being done by Chinamen."

Filipino Insurgents Determined to Carry On the Struggle.

Many Supposedly Loyal Natives Sympa thize With Rebels and Prove to Be Traitors.

Reports reach the Associated Press from various sources, including army officers and the heads of commercial houses with agents throughout the islands, of continued activity among the insurgents who are endeavoring to keep alive the armed opposition to the United States and are planning to continue the insurrection with guerrilla warfare on a larger scale when the rainy season begins.

A person holding a position second only to that of the governor general tells the Associated Press he is convinced that the insurgent organization has been remarkably rehabilitated during the past month, particularly in the northern provinces. He says the insurgents have a secret organization patterned after the Katipunan methods, even in the strongest garrisoned towns, affording perfect means of comcent order the qualifications of a voter | munication, and that the machinery is were that he must be able to read and | managed from Manila, some of the leaders being Filipinos pretending to be supporters of the American administration, and many of the municipal governments installed by the army forming part of the machinery.

Two correspondents of leading American weeklies who have traveled for a month in Benguel and Ilocos with letters to insurgent chiefs, going alone fifty miles from garrisons and being everywhere hospitably received, say the people make no secret of their sympathy with the insurrection. Although admitting that the Filpino soldiers abuse them, they still protect these soldiers from the American scouting parties. They claim to have communication with aguinaldo. Paterno, officials at Havana that the Cubans in the northern mountains of Manila, would in engage in rows among them- is full of civil and mititary officials of all ranks of Aguinaldo's government who were captured or surrendered and who were brought here and released on promises to refrain from agitation.

The Poacher's Dog.

The successful professional poacher is a fellow i keen observation. He has a complete comprehension of animated nature, of woodcraft, and of how changes in the weather affect the customs of his quarry. Discarding the gun, which has the disadvantage, unless it be an air one, of betraying his presence, he chiefly relies on nets and his dog. The breed of dog-commonly a cross between a greyhound and a collie-is called "lurcher." In addition to having the speed of the one parent, and the "nose" and intelligence of the other, a lurcher has more stamina than a greyhound, never gives tongue, and will usually retrieve. In frosty weather a lurcher bred from a staghound is preferred, as it has harder feet than a dog of the greyhound breed. The terrier lurcher, being apt to bark, is of little use to the poacher.

The training of these dogs is of a very high order, as upon it almost entirely depends the poacher's success, and often his safety. Here is an actual incident. A peacher on the hunt for hares had set his net at the gate of the field. Motioning his dog to range, he was surprised at his refusing to do so. Growling, it crouched at its master's feet. His suspicions aroused, the poacher, glancing back, discerned the burly figures of two keepers stealthily creeping up behind the hedge at the opposite side of the road. Seeing they were observed, the keepers sprang over the hedge, but, thanks to the timely warning of his lurcher the poacher, making good use of his legs, effected his escape, minus his poaching implements. On account of the use to which the lurcher is put it is looked on with reproach, yet this creature is often a perfect model of animal beauty, and in intelligence and capability is inferior to no other breed.-Chambers's Jour-

Wrong Way to Advertise.

Street boardings, covered with flashy posters, are as much a nuisance in the city as the rocks and trees defaced with hideous painted signs are on railroad lines. The place for advertisements is in a paper, not on a fence. I doubt whether the posters do advertisers any good; they seem more likely to repel than to attract business patronage. There should be a city ordinance to prohibit the disfigurement of our streets. Look, for example, at the ugly sign-board fence that Mr. Elbridge T. Gerry has erected around the ruins of the Windsor hotel, thus adding another horror to those of the fatal fire. I hope that the Herald will continue its crusade against such unsightly and offensive attempts at publicity .- N. Y. Town Topics.
